Working to expedite delivery, a PTP program manager meets with our client at the outset to gain an understanding of the projects, the schedules, financial constraints and the client's needs and goals. Using this knowledge, the program manager develops a timeline to determine the critical path, defines an action plan, develops a conflict resolution strategy and coordinates the actions of all team members with the goal to overlap the completion of critical steps. This approach allows for a more predictable and often a speedier completion of construction than a more conventional linear management model as well as providing substantial economies of cost to the Owner for management services.

Our program managers maintain status reports, produce regular summaries of project expenses including forecasted and actual costs, implement quality procedures to ensure compliance with federal and state guidelines, act as the owner's representative at key meetings, and conduct team meetings to ensure that timeline commitments are being met. Most importantly, the PTP program managers make sure our clients are fully apprised at all times as to the progress of the project.
